PREFACE

The information about diaries in the following pages has been gleaned from many and diverse sources. Some of the manuscripts have been examined personally by the editor, many more have been described by the owners or custodians. The quoted bits of description are either from the editors of those diaries that have been printed or cited in published works or from the letters of their owners.

That errors have crept in goes without saying; that only a part of such manuscripts still preserved have come to the attention of the compiler is also unfortunately true. Many of the diaries listed seem to have but little value, but however insignificant they may contain facts saved by no one else and of great interest to a few. Others, like those of Judge Samuel Sewall and the Rev. Ebenezer Parkman, give nearly complete histories of the social life of the towns where the diarists lived.

By the term New England diaries, is meant those either kept by a resident of New England at home or abroad, or by the stranger who came to our shores and wrote his experiences and impressions.

The sea journals of the period before 1800 are of much interest. The captain or mate who kept the log frequently included in it the various happenings on board or in the harbor and endowed it with his own personality. Some of the sea journals were kept by passengers—breaking up the daily monotony of the voyage by this diversion and preserving for us a vivid picture of the loneliness and danger of sea travel in those early days.

Diaries commenced after 1800 have not been included though there are many of great interest. After that date records were more faithfully kept both in town and church and sea journals became more technical and less picturesque.

In pursuing this line of work during the last ten years, I have met with great kindness and courtesy from very many persons. I should like to name them all did space permit, but I can only mention those who have been my constant advisers and helpers. First of all I wish to express my gratitude to the American Antiquarian Society and to its librarians, Mr. Clarence S. Brigham and Mrs. Mary R. Reynolds. Without their cordial and interested assistance this book would not have been possible.

To Mr. Robert K. Shaw of the Worcester Public Library, Mr. Julius H. Tuttle of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and Mr. William P. Greenlaw of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, I am also greatly indebted. Mr. J. C. L. Clark of Lancaster has been constantly alert to bring one diary after another to my attention. Mr. George Francis Dow of Topsfield has not only given assistance and inspiration, but has attended to the details of seeing the volume through the press.

All these I thank most heartily and also the large number of busy people who have answered my letters so patiently and kindly. I hope that this book may be of assistance to them or a source of satisfaction in the knowledge that they have given unusual information and pleasure to others.

Diary: Mar. 20, 1780 - July 9, 1783. "This journal," says Mr. L. P. Powell, "gives a better and more detailed account of affairs at that time and place than any one else has afforded us.

"A journal in which were noted down almost daily such military, social, or political incidents as seemed to him of sufficient importance to be recorded for the instruction of his children or for his own reminiscences in later life.

"Some glimpses also of American Society appear in the Journal; the impression produced by Gen. Washington's appearance and manners. General Varnum's conversation in Latin, the hospitality of Lady Washington and of Mrs. Greene, the beauty of Mrs. Temple and other ladies. Madeira and toasts, the schools, the churches, the psalm singing, the ragged and unshod soldiers, the taste for porcelain, the men spending whole days by their firesides and wives. These and many similar incidents give us quite an insight into the American life of that day as it presented itself to the eyes of a French gentleman, rather ceremonious in his manners and rigid in his principles."

Diary: Nov. 5, 1794 - Dec. 9, 1811 (dates of extracts.) "The general character of the brief entries in the old fashioned hand, cramped yet firm, varies little from day to day. The weather is always given the first place. She records not only a noble year for apples, good sap weather, and fine wholesome air, but also the blooming of the lilacs, the coming of the leaves and the starlight on the snow. After the weather comes the brief record of the household tasks accomplished during the day. The brief entry generally all told in a dozen words. Closes with some item of news."

MS. owned in 1894 by her son Mr. John H. Bryant. Extracts published in "Harper's Mag.," Sept. 1894, p. 633.

COMER, JOHN, REV., of Newport, R. I., s. of John and Mary (Pittom) Comer, b. in Boston, Aug. 1, 1704; m. Sarah Rogers of Newport, Jan. 20, 1726; d. at Rehoboth, May 23, 1734.

Diary: 1722 with occasional notes of previous events in his life beginning with his birth, to May 1, 1733. "His diary covering the greater part of his life is of an antique pattern. He often jots down occurrences in the fewest possible words. He deals little with the pictorial and picturesque elements. Historically considered, this diary, which is often quoted by Backus and others, is valuable."

MS. owned by Rhode Island Hist. Soc. Published in Rhode Island Hist. Coll., VIII, with very full notes by C. Edwin Barrows, D. D.

COMSTOCK, CHRISTOPHER, of Chatham, Conn., s. of John and Mary (Lee) Comstock of Lyme, Conn., bapt. Feb. 6, 1731/2; m. Anna Wiley; d. Oct. 30, 1808 aged 82.

Diary: Apr. 20, 1783 - Aug. 15, 1801. "The Journal so carefully kept for twenty years is a mine of names and dates and a record for a part of New York which is deficient in public records of marriages and deaths. Mr. Constant's Diary is a curious study. He chronicled so many unimportant petty details of his daily life and yet made no mention of the historic fact of the First inauguration of Pres. Washington, although he was in New York City preaching at that date. It is a simple record of twenty years of patient toil in the service of the Master and has a pathetic interest quite apart from its value genealogically."

MS. owned by E. W. Roebling. Published by Lippincott, Phila., 1903.

COOKE, SAMUEL, REV., of Second Precinct, Cambridge, s. Lieut. Samuel and Ann (Marsh) Cooke, b. in Hadley, Jan. 10, 1709; m. (1) Sarah Porter of Hadley, int. Aug. 29, 1740, (2) Anna Colton of Newton, int. Sept. 5, 1742, (3) Lucy Hancock Bowes, int. Oct. 14, 1762; d. at Menotomy, June 4, 1783.

A most valuable description of life in the jail. "In the foregoing Narrative I have endeavoured to avoid writing with warmth (tho' it might have been pardonable from the abusive usage we met with) least it might be thought I was actuated by prejudice and anger. I must confess I have been often at a loss to determine which they seemed most to deserve, my anger or my Pity; They deserved the former from the scandalous treatment we received; and the latter claimed a share from the consideration of their being fellow creatures, made after the image of the Glorious Creator of us all and by whose restraining Grace alone we are made to differ.

Teach me to feel another's woe.
To hide the fault I see,
That mercy I to others show
That mercy show to me."
